Project Risk Management: Reducing Uncertainty

Presented by Robin Nicklas

The primary purpose of risk management is to make project outcomes predictable. This requires a lot of work. Commonly used processes, tools and techniques of risk management will be explored in this presentation. A key success factor in any risk management endeavor is the ability to frame the risk statement in such a way that management can take action. This presentation will show how this is done.

Biography

Robin Nicklas is a project management consultant with a diverse career in managing software development and information services. In addition to delivering professional training in project management, Robin has lectured at the University of Washington's Business School, and is the past-president of the Puget Sound Chapter of PMI.
